Access

From Ajaccio city, take road D111, direction Sanguinaires islands.
The road follows exactly the sea side and you can't really miss the spot : it will be on your left.
There will be a cemetery on your right and a bus stop called "Nouveau cimetière" : it's there !
Park the car along the road, get down on the rocks and paddle as in any pointbreak : not straight into the peak !
Access is also possible by boat (from anywhere you want) or bus from city center of Ajaccio.

urchin, rips,
Corsica, as the whole Mediterannean area, has NO TIDES.
That means you can't get at a spot at low tide to check the eventual underwater hazards. Instead, you'd rather have a look when there's no swell. Note where the lone rocks and reefs are : there's not much of them but once you'll have broken a board on it, you'll understand...
The indication of maximum wave height on this spot is only an indication (!).
Haven't surfed there myself. Thought, by a 1 meter swell i have seen 10 to 12 surfers at the peak.
Does that make a lot or few for the corsican standards ?
In my opinion, due to the strange fetch and hard-to-catch weather conditions that could be a lot.
There's not thousands of surfers in Corsica, maybe even not hundreds...
That builds up pretty mellow feelings indeed, as far as i've seen it.
If you happen to surf there, you might find yourself in the middle of a bunch of friends surfing for the fun of it.

Atmosphere

General

Corsica is mainly a country/mountain island and this very spot, because it is located into one of the main cities, is among the easiest to find. Get there to check the swell and enjoy your first surf in Corsica.

Keep a low profile, thought, because corsican people are proud people and, like any "population, they are hot-blooded...

Just paddle in, smile and say hello.

Access

When at Ajaccio airport (Campo dell' Oro airport), leave by the road that goes immediately seaward (by car or by foot, it's about 600m. away). Then, on the left you'll see a big parking lot in front of the sea : park here (watch for burglars !). When facing the sea, turn left again and walk on the beach (toward Porticcio) until you see some barbed-wire : that's the end of the airport landing strip and that is also the first spot. The second spot is a but further, immediately at the feet of the only rocky point of this beach. On it stands a Genoese tower + some blockhaus from World War II. Access is also possible from Porticcio by the beach or by boat, from anywhere you want (ajaccio gulf). If you use a boat, look at a marine chart before you go : anchoring is forbidden in the take off / landing zone of the airport...you would'nt want a plane to crash on you, would you ?

nudist,

INFOS

The main danger of these 2 spots is the SHOREBREAK, because there are no tides in Mediterranean.
The waves constantly crash the same part of the beach and that builds up a serious shorebreak zone.
Apart from that, the beach is very safe and currents are poor.
The "landing strip" surf spot is a right and left beachbreak; the Genoese tower spot is mainly a left pointbreak with sand bottom.

NOTE : the immediate surroundings of the Genoese tower spot are a meeting place for men-nudists and gay men...so do not be surprised to see 'em look at you in an inviting way. They're not bad guys, thought, and you can smile back innocently : just be prepared to say no / yes, according to your own feelings.

Atmosphere

Very safe place if you except the shorebreak which, indeed, pushes a lot but does not get very high.

It is strange also to see the planes take off and land just a few meters away !

Maybe you should not let your family / friends put the towels under the planes...who knows, uh ?

Personnaly i enjoy more the Genoese tower spot because it has a more beautiful landscape (and not because it is a gay spot, too !!!)

but, anyway, there are no other surfers around so you can surf the 2 spots in the same session to make yourself an idea.

General

Just a few hundred meters away of the airport, this is the ideal place to surf in Corsica for the first time...if there is any swell, of course.

Take the time to come back here after a gale (when the wind calms down) or if you hear about a low pressure system West or SouthWest offshore Corsica island.

You can park on the road, this is now a parking! Then find the small trail and walk down to the beach.
A beautiful bay, a sort of frontier. The beach is 15km from the city of l'île-Rousse, so it's in the middle of nowhere (except in July and August of course!): after the beach, you can visit 'the Agriates desert', there are also waves to ride.
Good shore break for bodyboarders even when it's small; when the waves begin to break 100m from the shore, it could be a nice spot, but it's depend on the sandbars at the rivermouth.

&quot;Le pain de sucre&quot; is the name of the good restaurant setting just on the beach. You find a parking near the beach or can park on the cliff to have a good view on the spot.

Atmosphere

It's a beautiful spot, in a very small bay, in front of the citadelle of Calvi. So even in summer, the beach can not be crowded. The atmosphere is top at the morning, or at the sunset, with the beautiful light of the corsica island

General

A good spot to surf when the wave breaks on the sand bar 200m to the beach
A good bodyboard spot when it's a small gnarly shore break, and even a fun spot for bodysurfing, when the wave is so small but so beautiful, with a little perfect tube!
I like it!

When you get on the last parking lot before the road stops and the sea begins, stop (!).

You will have noticed : that's 2 spots in one place (thank you Wannasurf for giving me such nice presents!).

This 2 spots-in-1-place is also a famous diving mecca and the surf is mainly better during gales. You then have to shoot the offshore-exposed wave but that mean you have to wait for the swell to build up enough to turn around the point (diffraction).
The place is not very wide, though, and you should be very cautious about the CURRENT.
Haven't surfed there myself nor seen surfers...
I have, indeed, seen the postcard you can send by Mail... the one showing a hell-gale here with 2.5 meters waves at South point.
WATCH OUT FOR ROCK bottom and the occasional urchin.

Very harsh landscape, with the Sanguinaires islands just offshore and the whole gulf of Ajaccio in the East.

BONUS : during a swell, take a walk Northward between Parata point and the Minaccia bay.

No real info concerning the place but nautical charts show great potential and nearly no road : the perfect place for a secret spot !

and the second spot is totally on the opposite right of the beach, more like a beach sand( can be just as good if the swell comes more from the west.

Atmosphere

park your car where ever you can but you can drive directly on the beach by turning right, right after a restaurant called "l'auberge du ruppione!! Good vibes, respect surf priorities especially with locals. but nice!!

General

I live right on top of the spot, you can have waves all year long but more frequently on fall, winter and spring time.

It seems to work in quite big swell from NW, but on the left of this spot there is a long beach that I think can work with little waves from W or SW

The day I was there, there were only two surfers, but one was very unfriendly (local) and said to me "go, go". But I didn't surfed there only because the wave was really unpowerful, maybe some days can be better.

A beautiful view on the large bay of Calvi, an empty beach, with only a few camping-cars during summer. The water is cristal clear.

General

What I prefer is the sound of the wave, rolling overs the boulders.
